Calvain Culberson Named Armstrong Head Baseball Coach

Posted: Jan 27, 2014

SAVANNAH, Ga. - Armstrong Atlantic State University has named Calvain Culberson the head baseball coach for the Pirates, lifting the interim tag that he has served under since taking over the program in May of 2013.

Culberson succeeded Joe Roberts at the helm of the Armstrong baseball program on May 18 following the retirement of NCAA Division II's all-time winningest head coach.

A native of Rome, Ga., Culberson was a four-year standout for the Pirates from 1985-88 and was inducted into the Armstrong Athletics Hall of Fame in 2011 for his outstanding playing career. He played professionally from 1989-95, reaching as high as AAA Pawtucket in the Boston Red Sox organization and AAA Indianapolis in the Cincinnati Reds organization, and joined Armstrong as a full-time assistant coach in 1995.

Culberson assisted coach Roberts for 18 seasons as a full-time assistant before taking over the head coaching position on an interim basis last season.

"I'm very excited and honored to become the head baseball coach here at Armstrong," Culberson said. "I would like to thank our university President, Dr. Linda Bleicken, and our athletic director, Lisa Sweany, for having confidence in my abilities to lead Armstrong baseball into the future. The 2014 team has responded well to the coaching staff and to some of the changes that have been made and we are optimistic about representing the University well in the upcoming season."

Armstrong opens up the 2014 season on Saturday, February 1, hosting Voorhees in a 1:00 p.m. non-conference contest at Pirate Field.
